This exhibit from the Department of Rare Books & Special Collections displays illustrated books and maps about Mexico from the 16th century through to the late 19th century. The exhibit documents the gradual process by which the cultures of pre-Columbian Mexico were described and published in Spain, in rival European countries, in Mexico itself, and in the United States.

Most of the books on display have been in the USC library since the 1830's and 1840's. The oldest item is an engraving of Mexico city printed in 1565, from the Italian writer Ramusio's Voyages. Other early works include illustrations of Aztec customs by the German Theodor de Bry and Dutch maps in works by De Laet and Montanus.

Some of the most impressive volumes are from the early 19th century, in Alexander von Humboldt's Vues des Cordelleres et Monumens des Peuples Indigene de l'Amerique (Paris, 1810) and Lord Kingsborough's seven-volume Antiquities of Mexico (London, 1830), with colored facsimiles of pre-Columbian manuscripts. The architecture of the Aztec and Mayan cultures is represented both from Kingsborough's work and from J. L. Stephens's books about the Yucatan. In the final case is a copy of the Mexican military code owned by General Santa Anna.
